Legal Action Due In Power-Firm Strike

By Associated Press. KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1.—Gov. James T. Blair said today the state was preparing to take legal action to end picketing at Kansas City Power & Light Co. plants.

The governor told newsman in Jefferson City he had instructed Attorney General John M. Dalton to get suits ready for possible filing in Jackson County Circuit Court. "I will take whatever steps are necessary to protect the public interest," Blair said.

The state has been operating the utility for a month under Missouri's Utility Anti-Strike Act. Under this law, if strikers refuse to work their union can be fined $10,000 a day and the union officers each $1,000 a day, or the state can seek an injunction.

Injunction Favored
The governor said an injunction probably would be sought to halt the picketing that began last night. Supervisory employees maintained electrical service throughout the Kansas City metropolitan area without interruption.

The new strike within a strike technically is against the State of Missouri. The state took control of Kansas City Power & Light on August 31 after members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers had been on strike six days for higher pay.

Dispute Unsettled
The original dispute hasn't been settled. The workers still are more or less on strike against the company, although they returned to work after it was seized by the state.

A union official said the new walkout developed because the company sought to discipline 69 employees who refused to accept overtime work over the week-end. The company ordered them to take a one-day holiday without pay.
